

Vela, Monet@OEHHA

---

From: P65Public Comments
Sent: Wednesday, April 06, 2016 1:54 PM
To: Vela, Monet@OEHHA
Subject: FW: Clear and Reasonable Warnings Regulation

---

From: Joe Agliozzo [joe@agliozzo.com]
Sent: Friday, March 25, 2016 8:50 AM
To: P65Public Comments
Subject: Clear and Reasonable Warnings Regulation

Comment:

Many Prop 65 warnings on consumer products are provided in font sizes so small as to be illegible for the ordinary consumer (who's not using a magnifying glass). Often the warning is also printed on the packaging in a non-contrasting color that makes the warning even more difficult to find or read. Consider an 8 point minimum font size as well as requiring a contrast similar to black type on a white background.

Also, if electronic signage at point of display is allowed for consumer products, how will the Attorney General or other enforcers be able to insure that the electronic warning was displayed at all times? What would prevent a retailer from turning the electronic display off at their convenience or turning it on after notice and claiming that the display was present at all times? Hard copy warnings on packaging are clearer and more reliable for all consumers.